CALL FOR PAPERS
 In recent years, the rise of artificial intelligence (AI) has dramatically shaped various fields, including the world of English language and literature. This conference seeks to explore how AI is transforming the study, creation and consumption of literature and language, offering new perspectives, challenges and opportunities.

OBJECTIVES OF THE CONFERENCE

1. To examine the impact of artificial intelligence on English Language and Literature, particularly in areas such as storytelling, literary production, criticism, and translation.
2. To explore interdisciplinary intersections between AI and literary studies.
3. To critically evaluate emerging narrative forms in the age of AI, including autobiographical writing, digital storytelling, and AI-generated texts.
4. To investigate innovations in English Language Teaching (ELT) influenced by AI-driven tools and technologies.

EXPECTED OUTCOMES OF THE CONFERENCE

1. Development of new research perspectives on the role of AI in reshaping literary theory, criticism, and creative practices.
2. Creation of academic networks and collaborations among national and international scholars working in literature, language, and digital humanities.
3. Innovative pedagogical strategies for integrating AI tools into English Language Teaching (ELT).
4. Critical frameworks for ethical AI engagement in literary studies, authorship, and cultural representation.
